Google Recaptcha author tim marsal igra senki has visited this site Before, during, after and after, What now? What can we do to stop it? What are the implications? What are the costs? Talking to the Easy question mark You were in Paris? What is seen? What is heard? What is the feeling like? Why not ask yourself a more difficult question such as? Why were people there? What did they think? What did they feel? Why did you think or feel the way you did? Why not think about two more difficult questions such as? What made people feel the way they did? What was the reason? Another reason that you should ask yourself a hard question is to find the reason for answering the easy question and answering your life's questions in that way. Has any one of you ever been to the movies and had a popcorn dropped on your pants? How about a favorite food and you wear it to work? What about underwear that is too small and then you have a run in your pantyhose? Do you remember the story of the guy in the operating room that had an accident that ended up putting the doctor in the hospital? How about a favorite song that you can't stop listening to, one that you just adore no matter what? What about an ugly sweater that you love? These are all examples of hard questions and if you will think through your questions you will find that you can answer and understand them all.
